SECRETARY ALGER

Suggests That Two Regiments Be Added to the Artillery Branch.

A Military Force Should Be Sent to Alaska An Increase in the Number of Cadets at the Military Academy Recommended-Statue to Grant.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—In his first annual report, Secretary Alger makes many recommendations for the betterment of the administration of the war department, based upon the conclussions of his subordinate officers. He asks favorable consideration for the proposition to add two regiments to the artillery branch, pointing to the valuable fortifications now being erected, which he says should not be manned by a corporals guard. He says of Alaska that as many as 100,000 people will be gathered there next year, and a military force should be sent to that territory and large emergency powers should be granted to the president to suppress lawlessness. Probably the creation of additional military reservations, like that of St. Michael's, may be the best means to meet the problem. A boat for the patrol of the Yukon is also asked for, as well as increased pay for the enlisted men serving in Alaska.

Secretary Alger recommends the revival of the grade of lieutenant general, saying that all the great nations give their officers much higher ranks than does the United States.

He indorses the recommendation of the superintendent of the military academy that the number of students at West Point be increased by allowing each senator to nominate a cadet. As an alternative he suggests that the president be authorized to appoint ten cadets at large each year.

Favorable comment is made upon the work of the military colleges of the country, but it is suggested that the law be amended so as to authorize details of army officers only to such work. colleges as have at least 150 pupils actually present. proper system of criminal jurisdiction over military reservations and of a hall of records for the storage of official papers. The estimate for army transportation is increased by $100,000 to provide means for moving heavy ordnances. To provide for the new posts needed on the sea coasts an estimate of $2,000,000 is submitted.

Until recently the hospital at Hot Springs was open only to soldiers of the regular army, but Secretary Alger has just amended the regulations so as to authorize the admission of suitable cases among the veterans of the late

In the opinion of the secretary an increase in the engineer corps in officers and enlisted men is indispensable. He points to the immense value and extent of the work now in the hands of this corps, and contends that it could be better supervised and improved in quantity and quality by the assignment of more officers, which is now impossible.

Secretary Alger transmits without reduction the estimate of the chief of engineers for the next fiscal year, amounting to $48,728,160, more than double the appointments for the current year. He says these are largely in excess of what they should be at a time when the demands upon the treasury are as great as now, therefore he ley will tacitly approve the programme justice to the chief engineer, Secretary Alger says that these estimates were made by his own direction, that the facts might be placed before congress, showing what the expenditures would were all the requirements of the river and harbor laws completed with, and he cites the fact that the outstanding continuous contracts for river and harbor work will require an expenditure of over $17,-000,000 for the next fiscal year. The secretary indorses the project for the construction of the ship canal connecting Lakes Huron and Washington with Puget sound, but states that active operations can not be commenced for some time, as the right of way has not yet been acquired.

Secretary Alger especially comments tain. for patriotism, generosity and zeal, Col. Buffington and Capt. Crozier, the inventors of the disappearing gun carriage, who generously donated the invention to the government.

mendation that provision be made for the erection in Washington of a statue to Gen. Grant.

The estimates for the next fiscal year aggregate $96,258,445, as against $62,-832,417, the amount of the appropriations for the current year. The principal items of increase are in rivers and harbors, where the estimate is $48,728,160, as against the appropriation of $23,278,028; fortifications and sea coast defenses, $13,378,571, as against $9,517,141, and military posts, parks and cemeteries, $2,558,639, against $889,867.

From Experts on the Methods of Cultivating Tobaccoin Kentucky and Tenna esses

Wanted By the Agricultural Department. WASHINGTON. Nov. 20.-The secretary of agriculture purposes issuing a series of farmer's bulletins on tobacco and has issued a circular soliciting contributions from experts on the method of cultivation, on the export tobaccos of Kentucky and Tennessee and on the marketing of tobacco. He promises to reward those whose contributions are accepted at the rate of $15 per 1,000 words, but suggested that no one essay should contain more than 10,000 words. The papers are to be submitted to the secretary not later than March 31, 1898. The circular issued gives the following directions for proceeding with the

(1) Methods of Cultivation - This should treat of practical work as done in the different districts as follows: Selecting the seed; the seed bed and how prepared in the different tobacco districts; the time and manner of sowing the seed; the time and manner of setting out the plants, the cultivation, fertilization, topping and cutting, protection from insects and diseases.

Secretary Alger has received a telegram from a Los Angeles newspaper Attention is called to the need of a offering to publish the advertisements of the war department calling for proposals for the building of the breakwater at San Pedro, Cal., and take their chances of obtaining money in pay ment from congress next session.

Public Printer Palmer has appointed Lewis C. Ferrell, of Illinois, to the position of superintendent of public documents in the government printing office to succeed F. A. Crandall, reduced. The appointee has for a number of years been the private secretary of Senator Cullom, of Illinois.

The people of Idaho have been deeply stirred by the recommendation made by Gen. Merriam, commanding the department of the Columbia, that the United States military post at Boise barracks be abandoned. They have made some strong representations to the war department on the subject with the result that it is now formally announced that the secretary of war does not contemplate the abandonment of the post.

Of Losses in the London Fire Will Fall on the American Companies.

Only Two Firemen Were Slightly Hurt During the Work of Extinguishing the Flames-All Historical Treasures of Cripple Gate Church Were Saved.

London, Nov. 22.—A number of fire engines are still playing upon the smoldering ruins which mark the scene of the great conflagration near the general post office Friday. Walls are falling every now and then.

It is impossible to accurately estimate the damage done, but the direct loss will probably be below $10,000,000. Consols and India three-per-cents have fallen heavily on the belief that the losses will necessitate heavy sales by insurance companies and most of the insurance companies' shares have dropped 10 to 30 shiflings.

The Evening Standard, in its financial article, Saturday afternoon says it is believed that the bulk of the fire losses will fall upon American insurance companies.

The last flames disappeared by 11 o'clock Saturday morning, but as this message is forwarded water is still being poured upon the red-hot masses of ruins. The burned district is surrounded by enormous crowds of pebple and the railroads are running excursions from the country.

In spite of the magnitude of the disaster, only two firemen were slightly injured during the work of extinguishing the flames.

About three hundred firms are seeking for new offices. The estimates of the amount of damage done range from $10,000,000 to $50,000,000, but according to the best opinion the loss is about $10,000,000.

The official report says the cause of the fire is unknown.

A large number of warehouses from five to six stories high have been burned and have partly fallen, the whole covering an area of 200 by 150 yards, bounded by Nicholl square, Edmunds place, Jewin crescent, Aus-Cross street.

The insurance agents take an optimistic view of the losses, their estimates ranging from $500,000 to $4,000,-000. It is a fact that dozens of burned out firms were not insured, in some cases because they were considered to be undesirable customers and in others because the locality has long been considered dangerous by the insurance companies. The latter assert that the sensational reports regarding the losses have been promoted on the stock exchange in order to influence stocks.

All the historic treasures of Cripple Gate church were removed, including the records of Oliver Cromwell's marriage, Milton's burial and the deaths from the plague in 1665.

LONDON FIRE.

One Hundred and Fifty Warehouses With Their Contents Destroyed-The Burned Territory Covers an Area of 100,000 Yards-The Loss is Over $25,000,000.

LONDON, Nov. 20 .- One of the most disastrous fires in London's history since the great fire of 1666, broke out in a large block of buildings lying eastward of Aldersgate street and between that thoroughfare and Red Cross street, just after 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. The flames were fanned by a strong wind and were fed by highly inflammable stocks of Christmas fancy goods and flimsy dress materials of all description, that filled every floor of the six buildings in the old street. Consequently the conflagration gained headway with surprising rapidity and was soon beyond the possibility of being checked by the few engines which were early on the spot. For four and a half hours the flames had their own way and it was after more than a hundred engines had worked an hour that the chief of the fire brigade sent out the signal that the fire was under control.

At 11 o'clock Friday night the fire was still the scene of greatest excitement. Fifty engines were playing upon the ruins, wagons were hurrying up coal and tons of water were pouring into the fiery debris.

The scene must occupy the fire brigade for several days, especially in view of the grave danger of the collapse of the shells of buildings which fall now and again with a loud report. The latest accounts indicate that nearly a hundred warehouses have been destroyed, while the loss will probably exceed £3,000,000 ($15,000,000). The historic church of St. Giles has been much damaged, the principal damage being to the roof, the old windows, the baptismal font and Milton's statue.

At 4 o'clock Saturday morning a very large force of fireman and about twenty engines have been working at a high pressure all night. The district ravaged by the fire is bounded by Aldersgate street, Red Cross, Maiden Head court and Bradford avenue, and intermediate streets of Jewin, Hamsell, Well and Edmund and Jewin Cresent, tralian avenue, Paul's alley and Red and part of Australian avenue, Paul's alley, Cripple Gate churchyard, Wood Street square, Monkwell street, Nichol square and Tore street.

It is officially reported that 150 warehouses have been gutted. A later estimate of the damage done places the amount at nearly £5,000,000 sterling ($25,000,000)

Nearly all of the British fire insurance companies are involved and fire insurance shares were practically unsaleable on the stock exchange Friday afternoon after the fire was well under

Nearly 300 telephone wires have been cut, thus interrupting communication with many of the big provincial towns. The fire will cause an enormous advance in the price of ostrich feathers, which rose 30 per cent. Friday evening. Two feather firms alone have lost £15,-000 sterling ($75,000)

The damage done by the fire is enormous. Most of the buildings destroyed were six stories high and filled with merchandise.

The area of the fire is at least 100,000 square yards. Sixty warehouses have already been destroyed and the fire has extended from Wood street square to Aldersgate street.

The fire originated in the store of an umbrella manufacturer on Hamsell street at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon, and the great loss of property seems to be due to the delay in summoning the fire department. The published report says that the police officer who first detected the flames blew his whistle loudly for assistance, but several minutes elapsed before the alarm was heard by any of his comrades. As soon as assistance reached him the officer was dispatched to call the fire brigade. But here again this was an unaccountable delay of 20 minutes before the first engine appeared. Then the fearful dimensions of the fire were apparent, and it was decided to circulate a call throughout the whole metropolitan Nervous Depression of Women. A woman will often without knowing it commit slow suicide for her family. She will think, toil and worry for her children. Too often they do not appreciate it. Her tired nerves and weary body at last reach a stage when she is almost powerless for any kind of mental or physical work, and she is depressed and worried over the conscious-ness that she is unable to perform her accustomed duties. Her organs of digestion are disordered and although there is a constant disposition to rest, wakefulness and loss of power to sleep are serious indications of nervous depression. What she needs is a course of Dr. Simmons Squaw Vine Wine to restore a healthy functional activity and give tone and vitality to her nervous system. the corn-roast. The boys had chosen the tallest, slightest saplings, and trimmed and cut them until they were like exaggerated fishing rods, with sharply-pointed ends. All the brush and small logs had been gathered and drawn on the stone drag to the high pasture, and piled on the summit of its grassy swell, where the hills and valleys could be seen sinking and rising far and wide, the endless ridges of the Green mountains sweeping away to the east and the blue Adirondacks closing the western view. It was the finest farm in northern Vermont, old Mr. Deane had always declared; and the high pasture had been for generations a favorite place for coasting parties and corn-roasts. It was more popular than ever now, since Sue Deane was the handsomest girl in the county, and counted her swains by the dozen.

"I don't know how Sue's ever goin' to settle down," said her mother, plaintively; "for there's no one man will humor her the way they all do now. And then, Sue's so masterful; she's as sweettempered as you please, but she always has her own way in the end."

"Sue's obedient enough, as far as I see," replied Mr. Deane.

"Well, father, she is to you, and always has been; but, dear me! with everybody else she does what she pleases. I will say she's generally right; but that's just it-she's got as much sense, and more, than most of her beaux, and she ain't likely to find a husband she can't rule. And that's poison to a woman like Sue; she needs to be managed herself. There's just one I'd choose for her, and that's Tom Kellogg. But then, my land! he's not the kind to stand bein' played with, and for anybody, so there ain't much hope

"Tom's a good fellow," said Mr. Deane. " 'Tain't every boy could work through college 'nd law school, 'nd get into practice in a city, as he has in Burlington. And Sue and he, knowin' each other from children, ef they don't understand each other by now they never will. I think it'll likely be a match." Mrs. Deane shook her head. Accustomed to be ruled by her daughter's will, she had little faith in any man's combating its caprices successfully. In the main she was right. That very day Sue was planning in her coquettish leaving a balmy clearness in the far contemplating the side view of his mind how to tease Tom Kellogg at the coming corn-roast. "Oh, how beautiful!" she cried, as they climbed the slope, and saw the great bonfire flaming up on the summit. 'Do take me close to it, Mr. Kellogg!" and she chattered away to him, with little shrieks of admiration, as the wide streaks of flame shot high into the air and flared upon the summer wind. The one huge pine tree, stretching its wide branches upon the summit, was so near the blazing pile of logs and brush that one big limb caught a waft of the flame, and the needles snapped with crackling explosions. "Oh, will it be quite safe?" cried Eleanor, and clung for an instant to her escort's arm. Sue, passing near, felt a swift desire to strangle her on the

It was Thanksgiving day. The family gathering had taken place at the Wilcox homestead this year, for Mrs. Deane and Mrs. Wilcox were sisters, and alternated the festival. Mr. Deane, this time, however, was ill in bed, and his wife stayed to nurse him. Sue came over with the Alcotts, who were cousins and lived a mile or so beyond the Deane farm. There is nothing more seri-Good-by, Mr. Kellogg; I hope you will ous than a love affair to those concerned. It seemed to both of them that the next "Good-by," said Tom, holding out his hour or so would never be over. The games were all done by this time, but and cider, before the gathering finally broke up. The storm gradually ceased howling and sank away to a calm, so that when the good-bys had all been said, and the various teams were being harnessed, the sky was almost clear, and only a few drifting clouds obscured the stars.

Tom was so afraid that Cousin Reuben might reconsider that he brought the colt and cutter up before the rest of the teams were ready. The colt was prancing and eager; Sue, well wrapped in shawls and hood, was tucked in hurriedly; Tom jumped in, and they were off. Sue gave a little sigh of relief in the depths of her hood, for she had been afraid of Cousin Reuben, too. And yet, now that she was safely beside her lover, her old tormenting spirit rose within her, and she resolved she would not make a sign, after all.

The colt forged ahead through the feathery, piled-up snow. On each side the world stretched glittering and cold under the frosty stars. The keen air brought the blood to the cheeks, and stirred every pulse of life to the rhythm of the dancing bells on the harness. Tom sat upright as a statue, looking neither to the right nor the left. Sue waited two minutes for him to speak--five-ten. They would be at home in half an hour. He expected her to begin, and she never could-and she must-and it was very unkind of him -and he was right-and oh, she couldn't! Having arrived at this point, two big tears rolled down her cheeks, and she said, in a very trembling voice: "Tom!"

Tom, who had felt his resolution slipping away from him momently, and whose heart was one ache of tenderness toward the willful little bundle of shawls at his side, turned rapturously, with a jerk. The colt felt the rein slacken, seized his opportunity, shied wildly at a fallen branch whose twisted blackness stood threateningly out upor. the fresh snow-and, in his swaying rush, turned the cutter over, and threw both of the occupants into the nearest snowdrift. Then he trotted peaceably down the road toward home..

To be shot headforemost into a snowbank is confusing. Exactly what happened, Sue never knew; but the first thing she found herself doing, when she came to her clear senses, was holding on very tight to Tom, and asking him, tenderly and incoherently, if he was hurt. And Tom was laughing. "I'd be willing to have every bone in my body broken, Sue, to know that you care so much!" he whispered, and caught her so close in his strong arms that she was quite reassured as to his safety.

Above them the last cloud had drifted out of the sky. The broad, starlit azure arched over their heads with a friendly clearness and calm. Faintly, yet drawing nearer, came the chiming bells of another sleigh, far down the road. And, sitting in the snowdrift, the lovers kissed each other, and never even knew that it was cold .- Priscilla Leonard, in N. Y. Independent.

WORD ABOUT PERFUMES. Some Please the Senses. But Don't Help the Nerves.

One of the best remedies for a sallow or "muddy" complexion is a generous diet of fruit. Many kinds of fruit possesses wonderful powers of clearing the skin and giving it a translucent appearance. A celebrated skin specialist once said that several sound, ripe apples eaten daily would beautify the skin when local applications had proved useless. As a matter of fact a torpid liver is frequently the immediate cause of skin troubles, and the juice of apples, containing as it does a valuable acid, acts upon the liver, and helps the digestive organs to work properly. Among the most valuable fruits, the daily use of which helps to improve the complexion, may be mentioned oranges, tamarinds, nectarines, peaches, plums, blackberries, pears, medlars, black currants, strawberries, gooseberries, red and white currants, lemons, limes, and -most valuable of all-apples.

An excellent antiseptic wash for the teeth, which also acts as an astringent if the gums are spongy and unhealthy, is composed of tannin, half a drachm; tincture of myrrh, five fluid drachms; spirits of horseradish, two ounces; tincture of tolu, two fluid drachms. Add a teaspoonful of this mixture to a tumblerful of cold or tepid water, and well brush the teeth, afterward thoroughly rinsing the mouth out with it. Another capital astringent and antiseptic mouth wash is made by simply adding three drops of oil of eucalyptus to a tumblerful of water.

Here are two old-fashioned recipes for homemade toilet waters for adding to the baths. For violet water put a quarter of a pound of freshly-picked violets, together with their weight of pure alcohol, into a large bottle, cork and shake the bottle every day for one week; then add half a pint of distilled water: filter and bottle for use. Lavender toilet water may be made by steeping, for one hour, over a slow fire, in a covered farina boiler, one pound of fresh lavender flowers in one pint of water. On its removal from the fire add two quarts of alcohol, filter and keep in a closely-stoppered bottle for

The perfumes which are most agreeable to the senses are not always the most helpful to the nerves. Ambergris, for instance, is positively offensive to many, yet it is said to possess the virtue of clearing the brain and driving away those evil spirits known as the "blues." A faint odor of musk acts as a tonic, while civet brings drowsiness of soul, for which the best antidote is the pungent odor of sandalwood. The fragrance of citron and aloewood is as soothing to nervous people as far-off music. Many perfumes delightful in the open air become particularly disagreeable in a close room. A whole evening can be spoiled by the presence of tuberoses or lilies in a reception-room. Their strong fragrance causes a feeling of faintness. There are many fragrant flowers, such as carnation, clovepink, sweetbriar and apple-blossom, that are as beneficial as they are sweet scented. A vivid perfume is nearly always bracing, while a subtle one is generally enervating. One may become positively intoxicated through inhaling the odor of the peach, almond, wild cherry, and other blossoms of the same class, because they all contain a suggestion of prussic acid.-London Lady.

BETTER THAN THE BEST HOTEL

The Humblest Home Is a Million Times Better Than the Finest Hotel. Home life cements the love of husband and wife: other modes of living often loosen the tie. Nor does the question of expense excuse the not having of one's own home. A home is not, of neeessity, a palace. The humblest cottage is a million times better than the most luxurious hotel ever planned by the hands of man. In the one happiness is probable: in the other it is just possible. We can talk all we choose about married happiness; that it, after all, rests solely between two people, and that it makes no difference where they live. That is very good as a theory. But thousands of instances prove the contrary: that the theory will not work out in practice. Happiness depends upon the growth of the people who are parts of it. People who stop and stagnate are never happy. True happiness thrives on what it feeds upon. Let stagnation enter into two lives, and happiness becomes stagnant and unhealthy. But let our lives be filled with contentment, with domestic pleasure, with that germ of evolution which springs from the hearthstone, and the happiness which springs from those elements is purer, sweeter and more satisfying to our natures, our minds and our souls. A man and wife were made to abide together in inseparable lives, and as new elements come into that union to sweeten and hallow it the abiding place should be some little place, some corner in this big world which they can call their own, their very own, where everything around them speaks of the husband's energy and the wife's achievement. That is home.-Edward W. Bok, in Ladies' sit beside the flickering fire and lister to the rain, Which beats its solemn rhythmic march upon my window pane;

A dull and dismal monotone, but in its muffled tune Weird voices whispering of the past run softly through its rune; And somehow as familiar tones are thus conveyed to me, Loved faces from the shadow land within the room I see.

They come and go within the glow of my declining fire, The ones who for long years on earth fulfilled my heart's desire; An aged mother's gentle face in halo made of smiles, Whose memory still keeps far all sin which injures or defiles: Though now the coffin's lid shields her from earthly ill and care, voice comes back in accents sweet and bids her boy beware.

Near her a father's kindly face and grave but loving voice, With friends long gone who come again to solace and rejoice,

Whose presence seems here to diffuse blessing for their friend, Whose kindly smiles and gracious words with love in blessing blend;

Red embers burning low as though love' genial altar fires, raindrops marking time with beat which never flags or tires.

At such times come to seeing souls the spirits of the past, The memories oft by daylight cares and stern work overcast;

The forms which touch us not at all in toilsome garish day, The gentler thoughts in business hours as shy and sweet as they; But when the twilight shadows veil day's worry, fret and rush, Ghosts march timed by the rain's tattoo through evening's restful hush.

How sweet sometimes to rest at eve, to hold this glad commune, With rhythmic rain and rhythmic thought, and gentlest hours in tune; Our better selves thus touching souls which long since went away, To leave us none we loved with quite so true a trust as they; so when embers turn to gold and rest

Our eyes close to the ills of life, our weary souls are fain welcome those whose tones blend with the rhythm of the rain.

CHAPTER XI.—CONTINUED. Slowly and cautiously they descended the stairs. At Whidby's door the hypnotist stopped, held up his hand warningly, bent his body forward, and stood motionless for about two minutes. Warrenton did not know whether he was listening for a sound within or concentrating his hypnotic power on Whidby In the dim moonlight that fell through the frosted glass of the front door, the colonel could see the doctor's forehead was wrinkled, and his massive brows drawn together. Then the hypnotist stood erect, took a deep, full breath, and said: "He's all right now; come in."

He turned the doorknob and entered. Whidby was lying on his side. In the white light from without, his face looked pale and thin. The doctor bent over him and said, softly, but imperatively: "Sleep! sleep! you are sleeping now deeper and deeper. Ah, there you go!" Then, to the great astonishment of the colonel, he turned, laughed aloud, and spoke to him in an ordinary tone.

"Good! so far it could not be better. Now we are ready for the test. Ah!"as he noticed the colonel's start-"you need not be afraid of his hearing us; he is as far away as if he were dead. See." -the hypnotist chuckled with satisfaction as he pointed to the bloodstained chair near the bed and Whidby's shirt upon it--"see, he has followed my instructions to the letter. Good! The folding doors, I think, on the night of the murder, were pushed back and the curtains hung between; is that not so?"

"All right." The hypnotist slid the doors apart, and released the portiere from the holders on each side. "Now for your role, and then we will begin. It may not be very pleasant for you, but you will oblige me if you will lie down in the bed in the next room in the same position as that in which they found the dead man." Warrenton stared; then he laughed

awkwardly, and said:

"All right; I am at your service." "Whidby won't hurt you, I give you ny word," said the doctor. "Take off your coat and throw down your suspenders-this way. I would have asked you to wear a night shirt, but I was afraid you'd catch cold."

The colonel took off his slippers, turned down the sheets, and got into the bed, lying on his side with his face to the window. "Was that Strong's position?" asked the hypnotist. "As nearly as I can remember."

"All right. Now let me cover youso. Now watch Whidby, and don't stir if he comes to you-not even if he touches you rather forcibly. I assure you he won't be able to hurt you."

"All right. I am ready." The portiere was hanging between the two rooms, but Dr. Lampkin held it behind him as he leaned against one of the folding doors so that Warrenton could see Whidby's bed. The colonel great flashing eyes were fixed on the sleeper, his brows contracted; all his mental force seemed concentrated upon one suddenly waking from sleep. He obeyed, looking as if he were wide awake. "Do as you were told to do on the night of the 10th of June. Do it, I say! don't hesitate."

Slowly Whidby walked toward the window at the head of his bed, but with-dow, with his hand outstretched, but Whidby? But he may be asleep." again, with the same gesture, he stopped and retreated to the center of the room.

The colonel witnessed the whole proceedings. He fancied he saw an expression of vexation on the face of the hypnotist, every muscle of which seemed drawn, every vein about to burst. His large eyes seemed to start from their sockets. For the third time, though now no word was spoken, Whidby aproached the window, and then, with a deep sigh and a strange child-like whimper, he returned to his bed and sat down on the side of it.

Ten minutes passed. The hypnotist stood like a statue. A thrill of sudden fear passed over the colonel. Could any man be sane with that look on his face? Some one passed along the street whistling, and carrying a lantern. Its light danced about on the walls for an instant. In the flashes the colonel saw Whidby had covered his face with his hands. "Come, get up!". In the awful silence the tones sounded like a clap of thunder. The colonel heard them ringing in echoes in the hall. Whidby rose, passed the folding doors, and entered Strong's room. The hypnotist released the portiere, letting it fall across the opening, and cautiously followed Whidby, who slowly approached the foot of the bed and then went round to the right and bent over the colonel. The young man was breathing hard and excitedly. He felt the colonel's body through the covering, and then, turning it down at the top, he pressed his fumbling fingers against Warrenton's bare throat two or three times, then drew himself up, and, turning, went slowly back towards the portiere. He caught it with his right hand, drew it aside and passed in.

Dr. Lampkin was close behind him, followed by Warrenton. They drew the portiere aside just in time to see Whidby strike the chair which was between him and the bed. He grasped the top of it with his right hand and leaned so far forward that the others thought he was going to lose his balance and fall on his face. However, he recovered his equilibrium, and paused to replace the shirt, which had fallen on the floor. Then he lay down on the bed, turned his face from them and closed

What was that? I thought I heard a sound in the other

"Don't be frightened; it is I," sounded from behind a screen in a corner, and a man in a broad-brimmed slouched hat, long whiskers and linen ulster rose into view. where he crouched. Warrenton and Dr. Lampkin watched him curiously, both with long faces. When he had finished and closed his lantern with a snap, Warrenton ventured to say:

"If you have discovered anything, sir, which would lead you to believe that my young friend was not the instrument of a hypnotist, and not made to commit the crime, I should be very grateful. CHAPTER XII. The next morning about ten Miss Annette Delmar was admitted to the drawing-room of the Strong residence. She was thickly veiled. She told Matthews she wanted to see Mr. Whidby at once. As she took her seat she heard voices in the library across the hall. She recognized Whidby's voice and Col. Warrenton's, and now and then heard masculine tones she did not recognize. She rose when Whidby came in, but was startled at the sight of his pale, troubled face.

"Don't scold me," she said, extending her hands and speaking tenderly. "I could not let another day pass without seeing you after my weakness yesterday when you told me about your foolish fears in regard to hypnotism and your being the-the tool of some one with that power. I was so horrified, you seemed so earnest about it, and it shocked and frightened me so that I could not comfort you. But now that I have thought it all over I am not worrying at all. Dear, it is only imagination on your part. You have read of such things and fancy them possible to yourself. I don't believe a word of it. You had nothing in the world to do with it. It is only an absurd idea."

Whidby put his arm round her and drew her to a sofa. He did not speak for a minute, but sat stroking her gloved hand. Then he said:

"You ought, not to come here, dear;

I like to hear it expressed," he said to the young lady. "If you had been present last night, Miss Delmar, you would not have let them think so."

"How are you going to prove it?" asked Col. Warrenton, hopefully. "Don't make any mistake this time. Much depends on it. Whidby has been fretting his heart out over the horrible idea."

"May we go into Mr. Whidby's room now?" asked Hendricks. "Miss Delmar may come also. I can explain things better to ladies than to men."

Warrenton opened the door. "Certainly; the room has been put to rights.

"Now," began the detective, when they had entered Whidby's room, "we won't indulge in so much realism as to have the colonel representing the dead man, nor Mr. Whidby playing the role of a peaceful sleeper, out of respect for Miss Delmar's nerves; for, while she would really make a better detective than any one of you, she is only a woman, after all, and we won't make the picture any more gruesome than is necessary. For our purpose we will simply imagine that the other room contains a sleeper, and that Mr. Whidby is reclining on this bed. Now, Dr. Lampkin, when Mr. Whidby was hypnotized last night and you made him get up, did you notice whether his right hand was closed or open?" "I did not," replied the doctor, with a sudden start and then a questioning stare into Hendricks' face.

> Cylindrical Cotton Bales. At first transportation companies and manufacturers were doubtful of the advisability of introducing the new cotton presses which turn out cylindrical bales. They believed they could not be packed readily, and that it would be difficult to remove samples. The latter objection was soon shown to be groundless, and it was demonstrated that the new presses pack the cotton so compactly that it requires less space than by the old system of square bales. This same compactness was proved, by actual experiment, to be a great protection in case of fire. Inky water was also thrown over it, and would not penetrate. There is a growing belief in the south that the round bale is coming | nal. into general use.

FLIES IMPRISONED IN AMBER. Though Thousands of Years Old, the Insects Are Well Preserved.

A valuable collection of amber is beng exhibited in London which is attracting much attention from both naturalists and the public. Most people know that amber, away in the dim ages, was gum of the most transparent and liquid kind which oozed from the pines growing in countries near to what is the Baltic sea of our day. The trees decayed and mingled with the soil, but the resin was stored up by nature and when, as the centuries rolled on, the earth began gradually to sink and the sea washed over what was once dry land the wood soil was upheaved and the hard gum carried off by the waves, to be dropped to the bottom of the ocean. There the action of the water in the course of further ages slowly converted the lumps of resin into the fossil, which the ocen currents have since disturbed and often cast back on the coasts. It was in oozing from the pine trees that the liquid resin caught up in its course insects and other things which have been wonderfully preserved. Ants and spiders, with as much facility as if they stood on an object glass, and of such a delicate consistency was evidently this His father, who had desired for him trickling gum that the winged insects

CANADIAN CUSTOMS OFFICERS COLLECTING DUTY AT LAKE TAGISH.

The rich gold mines of the Klondyke are in Canada. Duties averaging 25 per cent. of the cost of every outfit bought anywhere in the United States must be paid by every person going to these mines upon entering Canadian territory. The customs post established at the foot of Lake Tagish is at the junction of the Skagway and Dyea trails over which the goldseekers travel on their way to the Klondyke. It is guarded by an armed force of twenty-five men.

The miners who bought their supplies at Seattle and other places in the United States were an angry crowd when they arrived at the Tagish lake customs post. Those who had cash had to pay 25 per cent. of the cost of their outfits, and those who did not have money had either to give up one-quarter of their year's provisions or remain at the post for a few weeks sawing wood and helping to erect the government barracks. The men who had bought their outfits in Victoria, which is in Canada, upon showing their papers passed on without delay and without payment. Some of them were lucky enough to find rich mines at Klondyke before those detained at Lake Tagish, sawing wood for duties, were able to reach the diggings.

The railway fares are the same to Victoria as Seattle and miners' supplies are scheap. Miners for the Klondyke who buy their outfits at Victoria, from which steamers for the mines are leaving almost daily, will save one-quarter of the cost of their outfits by purchasing at that city which is the capital and commercial center of British Columbia.

Those intending to go to the Klondyke in the spring should write to the Secretary of the Board of Trade, Victoria, B. C., who will freely supply all information asked for.

NANSEN NOT ONLY EXPLORES. Burt county. The populists induced That Are Authorities.

'Dr. Nansen's success as an arctic explorer has made his fame so great in that direction that people are apt to forget that aside from his explorations he has done work which has made him favorably known to the entire scientific world. He has written several works on anatomy and physiology, and his "Treatise on the Nerves" is an acknowledged authority. He has in hand now a book in which he is taking up in the most careful manner the scienlific results of his expedition.

As to whether he may make another try at the northern country Dr. Nansen does not say definitely. Probably he has not decided. If he was to go again, aided by the experience which he has now had and with the careful plans which he would make, there is every reason to think that his success would be even greater than on his last trip.

The construction of the Fram, eggshaped, so as to resist the pressure of the ice, has been often described, but many of the details which were carefully carried out and which greatly assisted the success of the expedition and the comfort of the men, are not thought of. One feature which was of immense benefit was the electric light plant which the ship carried. Arctic expiorers have suffered great inconvenience for want of light in their long, dark nights there. The Fram was no sooner anchored than Dr. Nansen set up the windmills which he carried with him, and from the power thus easily and regularly generated, he manufactured a plentiful supply of good

FOR SYSTEM OF PLAYGROUNDS New York's Committee Recommends

a Plan for Adoption. The report of the committee on small parks which Mayor Strong, of New York, appointed last June was laid before the mayor. Accompanying the report was a map showing the density of population and the death rate in the trict. The men were registered from respective wards.

"In the original plan of the city of New Nork," says the committee, "the children seem to have been forgotten. Doubtless this oversight was due to the extensive area of unoccupied land which was available for the games and sports in which the youth of that day were wont to indulge. But as the city has grown in population, and especially within the last 30 years, this un- er employed in New York harbor. He occupied space has been covered by improvements which has left the children no other opportunity for play but such as can be found in streets."

The report goes on to say:

"Your committee is convinced from the careful examination which it has been enabled to make, and especially by the marvelous improvement in the neighborhood of the new small parks which have recently been brought into use, that the failure to provide for the reasonable recreation of the people, and especially for playgrounds for the rising generation, has been the most efficient cause of the growth of crime and pauperism in our midst."

Attention is drawn to the fact that it is only within the last year that the primary and superior right of childbood to air and sunshine has been recognized by throwing open all the green space of Central park to the use and enjoyment of the children. It is recommended that playgrounds be established at 14 different places. A rough | roads, two railroads and two large estimate of the cost of carrying out all these recommendations puts the cost at $3,580,000. The committee particularly surges that playgrounds be put in all the new and in the existing parks.

WOMEN DO NOT TELL THE WHOLE TRUTH.

Modest Women Evade Certain Questions When Asked by a Male Physician, but Write Freely to Mrs. Pinkham.

An eminent physician says that "Women are not truthful, they will lie to their physicians." This statement should be qualified; women do tell the truth, but not the whole truth, to a male physician, but this is only in regard to those painful and troublesome disorders peculiar to their sex. There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions when those questions are asked, even by her family physician. This is especially the case with unmarried women. This is the reason why thousands and thousands of women are now corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham. To this good woman they can and do give every symptom, so that she really knows more about the true condition of her patients through her correspondence than the physician who personally questions them. Perfect confidence and candor are at once established between Mrs. Pinkham and her patients.

Years ago women had no such recourse. Nowadays a modest woman asks help of a woman who understands women. If you suffer from any form of trouble peculiar to women, write at once to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will advise you free of charge.

And the fact that this great boon which is extended freely to women by Mrs. Pinkham, is appreciated, the thousands of letters which are received by her prove. Many such grateful letters as the following are constantly pouring in:

"I was a sufferer from female weakness for about a year and a half. I have tried doctors and patent medicines, but nothing helped me. I underwent the horrors of local treatment, but received no benefit. My ailment was pronounced ulceration of the womb. I suffered from intense pains in the womb and ovaries, and the backache was dreadful. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form. Finally I grew so weak I had to keep my bed. The pains were so hard as to almost cause spasms. When I could endure the pain no longer I was given morphine. My memory grew short, and I gave up all hope of ever getting well. Thus I dragged along. At last I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her answer came promptly. I read carefully her letter, and concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I felt much better; but after using six bottles I was cured. My friends think my cure almost miraculous. Her noble work is surely a blessing to broken-down women."-GRACE B. STANS-BURY, Pratt, Kansas

HE CONQUERED IT.

Awful Struggle with a Monster That Finally Yielded. All was silence for a moment.

Then a loud, shrill shriek rent the startled ir. There was the sound of a heavy body alling, a crashing of timbers, a noise as of sinful spirits wailing in despair. A chain creaked dismally and then parted with a dead, metallic snap. Staggering backward, he fell against the washstand. The bowl and pitcher fell in a confused mass of broken crockery upon the floor, while the water flooded the room. Again he advanced to the attack, and the black-browed monster bent slightly forward and cast him full length upon the floor. Blood gushed from his wounds, but he leaped again to the attack. With loud curses he grappled with the demon. His garments were torn in a hundred places. One eye was black and blue! The other was blue and black! But still he kept up the fearful combat. At length, when nearly exhausted, with his life blood slowly oozing from a thousand wounds and his breath coming in short, painful gasps, he won! The dread monster lay wide open before him.

"There!" he said, as he wiped the drops of perspiration from his brow. "There! It's cold day when I can't open a folding bed!" -N. Y. World.

Another Hiad.

The following story proves what hardly needs proving, that a man may handle boo without being a scholar. It wasn't in the book stall of a department store; it was in a real bookstore; a bookstore, moreover, where you would expect to find salesmen who know books. A friend of mine went in the other day and asked for Pope's "Iliad." The salesman went away to look for it. Presently he returned with a book in his hand. "We haven't Pope's 'Iliad,' "he said, "but we have an 'Iliad.' It's by Homer, though."-Washington Post.

Free From Rheumatism.

If the people generally knew the true cause of Rheumatism, there would be no such thing as liniments and lotions for this painful and disabling disease. The fact is, Rheumatism is a disordered state of the blood-it can be reached, therefore, only through the blood. But all blood remedies cannot cure Rheumatism, for it is an obstinate disease, one which requires a real blood remedysomething more than a mere tonic. Swift's Specific is the only real blood remedy and promptly goes to the very bottom of even the most obstinate case.

Like all other blood diseases, the doctors are totally unable to cure Rheumatism. In fact, the only remedies which they prescribe are potash and mercury, and though temporary relief may result, these remedies produce a stiffness of joints and only intensify the disease. Those who have had experience with Rheumatism know that it becomes more severe each year.

The case of Mrs. James Kell, of 611 Ninth Street, S. E., Washington, D. C., should convince everyone that it is useless to expect doctors to cure Rheumatism. Under recent date she writes: he loves me. He hardly knows me, liv-

THE INQUISITIVE BOY.

I have a little boy of six Who sets me quite a task And often puts me in a fix By questions that he'll ask. "What helds the moon up in the sky? Where does the sunshine go? Why does my baby brother cry?" Are things he wants to know.

"Where does the gas go when put out?" He asked me yesterday. The question filled my mind with doubt. I wondered what to say. "If all the good people that die," Says he, "in heaven are crowned, Why don't they go up in the sky Instead of in the ground?

A NOVELIST'S BRIDE.

The betrothal and marriage of Mme. Octave Feuillet is told by herself, with charming naivete and wit, in "Quelques Annes de Ma Vie."

I was nearly 19 years old. My mother insisted that I must marry. Every week she presented a new aspirant, but when, after each interview, she asked, "Does this one suit you?" I replied,

'No, not this one." My father urged me also. It was generally during our horseback rides in the country, while we let our horses walk along the pretty routes, that he undertook my conversion.

"I know some one," he said one day, has asked for your hand."

"Another? Good heavens!" "Yes, another, but I hope you will not rebel when you hear the name of "Not too long," answered my father, "and may God inspire you." God inspired me that same night to think my cousin charming. Again, in imagination, I saw him at those three balls where I had danced with him and "Having heard S.S.S. (Swift's Sperecalled his handsome figure and bear-the day I was to leave the paternal home and take in the presence of God my title as madame.

Midnight was the customary hour for marriages in our part of the country. I was in hopes of having the day to myself, but I was obliged to busy myself in all sorts of ways, to try for the last time my wedding gown, to arrange flowers, and so forth.

Toward the end of the day, while the last touches were being added to my toilet, Victoire, my maid, who had been occupied in carrying different things to my new home, returned in consternation, saying that my cousin was not well, and that they did not know whether the wedding could take place. "Oh, mon Dieu!" said my mother. And she ran to carry her mixiety into the bosom of the united family. They took counsel together, and two relatives were sent as embassadors to the fiance. During this time my mother ran from room to room, calling all the servants, ringing bells, recommending calmness and doing her utmost to deprive me and

Finally the embassadors reappeared. "He is coming. He will be here in a few moments," they cried, ascending the stairs. "The indisposition has passed away." And they wiped their foreheads as they spread the good news.

After an hour's waiting the door opened, and my cousin entered the room. He was very pale, but very handsome, and I felt proud to belong to him. "I have been a little indisposed," he said, giving me his hand, "but I am quite well now, and I love you." This "I love you" came like a whisper, and I felt myself growing pale and flushed at the same time.

The dinner was long and serious. We were surrounded by aged relatives. My grandmother Dubois did not break her cold reserve, except to say to the servants, "Do not spoil my dress." My husband's uncle, a retired officer, who sat "who loves you, and who this morning at my right, had a stomach trouble and ate nothing. While waiting for the departure for church the men went to smoke and the women gathered around me like bees. "Ah, my dear," said one, "the great moment is at hand."

"Your dress is very beautiful," said another, "but dead white is not becoming to your complexion. It makes you look so dark. How will you arrange your veil? Will it cover your hair?"

"There are too many flowers in your wreath," said another. "Give me the scissors and let me cut out some of Harassed with this feminine enthusiasm and this idle chatter, I asked for a moment's respite and flew to my own little chamber. It was almost empty. Nearly everything that belonged to me had been carried away during the day and taken to my future home. The bed alone remained, and against the wall, between its muslin curtains, my basin of holy water. I fell upon my knees, moistened my fingers in the sacred water, then, carrying them to my forehead, murmured, "Lord, protect me."

We set out for the mayor's office, then we proceeded to the church. A fine rain was falling, and the dampness penetrated behind the glass of the carriage windows. I ascended the steps of the cathedral shivering. The harmonious notes of the organ greeted me under the somber arches. Clouds of incense were wafted toward me. The cure, standing under the great crucifix, addressed some remarks to me, my hasband placed upon my finger the sacred ring, and all was over.-Providence Journal.
